FIFA 17 introduced an improved player intelligence with smarter player movement, improved ball physics and more, plus the introduction of Champions League 2018-19 - the biggest licensed tournament in the world. What are the best prospects of the Premier League in this edition of the EA SPORTS FUTURE™ Pro League of the USA? Read on to find out. 3. West Ham United FC (top overall) It was only a short season, but this young Hammers team will already have learned how to survive in the Premier League. Their results were far from spectacular, but the way they defended, with a couple of high pressure traps, was a good sign. It won't be easy for them to beat the likes of Liverpool, Manchester City or Manchester United, but they've got good enough young players to build a team around in the next few years. 2. Manchester City FC (best team in the Premier League) What a difference one title makes! Last year, City were a struggling team in both the Premier League and the Champions League, and they were knocked out early in both competitions. This year, they have the potential to win everything. Even as an experienced player, watching Manchester City was fun. Their young players are on the rise and will eventually become a dominating force in England and Europe. 1. Liverpool FC (best team in England) Liverpool could have simply been crowned the best team in Europe last year, when they were holding the Europa League trophy, but this year's incredible performance in the Premier League meant they take the number one spot. If you simply look at the team's overall performance, without any consideration of their manager's achievements, then you're making a mistake. Jurgen Klopp has achieved more in just two years than Brendan Rodgers did in the last six. He's managed to create a team that looks like a real contender for both domestic and European trophies. To see how good Liverpool are this year, check out our best teams in the Premier League and Europa League. FIFA is back! For the very first time in the series' history, we are looking at the top prospects of the Premier League in this edition of the EA SPORTS FUTURE™ Pro League of the USA. FIFA 17 saw the introduction of "Player Intelligence", an improved player intelligence in each and every one of the

The first step in 'returning to the roots of the franchise' was to move the game away from the coaches and leagues that had so defined FIFA over the years. It would be the players that would go on to provide the foundation of the new game. Those players are now part of their second generation. EA DICE sports science director Dr. Manfred Sturm even went as far as to state that the new game would be "the most authentic football game that any human being has ever played".
