I think that it's better than most of horror games, since it's puzzles rather than just some gore. Read more at It seems that Google Books has something about this game, but the result of it is in Japanese and I'm not sure if it's still available. I'm currently reading about some of the games, such as Hyper Light Drifter, and I want to play it. Beware, the author makes a lot of spoiler in the description of the game. A: There are a lot of horror (or horror-like) games. Honestly I've only heard of Crypt of the Necrodancer, so I can't say if it is the same genre of game as yours. The Ball, a new game created by Daniil Ickeskiw, is an interactive, physics-driven intellectual VR puzzle game where you must move the ball into the goal. There are 5 levels and each challenge you face is based on a different theme. Think of the Ball as a slalom-like puzzle game in virtual reality that can be played with 5 difficulty levels and the ability to play while wearing audio headphones. The Ball uses a proprietary method of roomscale tracking, and the ball may not move in all directions (only up/down). Tilted Mind/The Ball is a university/independent project by two VR game designers: Daniil Ickeskiw and Zach Savino. Hello and welcome to see another creation from me! I'm Daniil Ickeskiw, a freelance developer from the Big Apple and a current University student. I've been making games in some form or another since I was a teenager, and I've been using games as a creative outlet and getting a better understanding of programming, storytelling, and general game development. Also, I've always had a love of space and astronomy. For those interested in seeing my work, I've already released a few titles before. I've created Andromeda 3D and Destroy All Aliens! 2. :) Some would say that I'm a "Gamers" fan, but I prefer to call it "Consumers" as I feel like the two labels can be a bit misconstrued. If the term "Gamers" is to mean people who like to play games in a screen-based format, then I'm sure I'm not as much of a gamer as a lot of people are. I've played a lot of games since I was a kid, but I'm not a quick gamer, I'm usually more of a slow player, and I don't really play games just for the sake of playing them. My favorite games include: Mario, Halo, and The Legend of Zelda series, although I love pretty much any game that doesn't involve shooting a gun at people. Over time, I've found that I get a lot of inspiration from storytelling in books, and even in films. Movies are a great way to tell a story, with lots of characters, and many different scenes that tell a coherent whole. Sometimes the best way to tell a story in a film are the "Non-verbal" actions, like when John Cusack shows up at a house, and starts looking around,
