We review the current status of the study of the cortical pathways of normal and abnormal visual function. The recent introduction of positron emission tomography (PET) has permitted quantitative in vivo study of cerebral functions, and the anatomical structures which convey information from the eye to the cortex can now be visualized with fine anatomical precision. In addition, there is the possibility of discovering specific physiological abnormalities in the brain's processing of visual information which can be correlated with neuropathological findings or disease states.An overview of the treatment of GVHD in rheumatic diseases. Rejection of donor grafts remains a major obstacle to successful allogeneic stem cell transplantation in patients with certain chronic hematological diseases, such as myelodysplastic syndromes and multiple myeloma. Graft-versus-host disease (GVHD) is one of the most common causes of death in these patients. This report summarizes the development and clinical applications of an immunosuppressant approved by the US Food and Drug Administration for prevention and treatment of acute GVHD in allogeneic bone marrow transplantation, and a drug approved by the US Food and Drug Administration in the treatment of chronic GVHD in solid organ transplantation., the language it uses, and the way it is presented. I've watched a number of interviews by myself and the language that the politicians are using, 6d1f23a050
