Sigma-1 receptor in the retina: pharmacology, distribution, and possible roles in diabetic retinopathy.

Sigma-1 (σ -1) receptor belongs to an emerging family of new receptor classes called SigmarRs. They are a group of postsynaptic receptors belonging to a new subtype of GABA(A) receptors. It has been reported that σ -1 receptor agonist is neuroprotective in models of acute brain injury, and σ -1 antagonists exerts neurotoxic effect in vivo. We hypothesized that σ -1 receptor may be involved in some basic mechanisms of retinal neurodegeneration. The aim of our study was to describe the expression of σ -1 receptor in the retina and its possible role in the progression of diabetic retinopathy (DR). Methods. Using semiquantitative reverse transcriptase polymerase chain reaction and Western blotting, we detected σ -1 receptor in the retina. To study the role of σ -1 receptor in DR, we used pioglitazone, a σ -1 receptor agonist, and 2-(5-isoquinolinesulfonamide)-methyl-1,2
